

PREMISE DELTA v0.4 (THE TRUSTING FORGERY, REWORKED): DISPOSITION · 2026-09-09

Two independent adversaries attacked the same frozen text of four-keys-premise-delta-trusting-forgery-v0.4-2026-09-09.md, told to attack the answers of the previous round. Fable: REWORK, high confidence, and in its own words "the device itself survives every front" (...-v0.4-attack-fable-2026-09-09.md). GPT: REWORK, high confidence, its first non-reject on this premise (...-v0.4-attack-chatgpt-2026-09-09.md). Findings merged in order of fatality with my concurrence and a provisional in-world answer. Walked with Stephen one row at a time; the Status column records his ruling. v8.1 remains in force.

Where the two converge

Both drivers and four of the serious findings are the same finding seen from two sides: Margo's duty to the estate (both; GPT's driver); the suspect pool closed by assertion (GPT fatal; Fable's Margo line); the fourteen days (Fable: the fifth key, the executor's bolt cutters, the book, the exposed Day 14; GPT: the enclosure rather than the shackle); Violet and the trade (both: "have you asked your lad"); chapter 7 as a suspect turn rather than a forgery turn (both, serious); the sister and the ashes after Day 14 (both). Four of these are v8.1 exposures as much as v0.4's (the fifth key, the executor and the store, Margo's estate duty, the trade and gilding) and are answered here for the story, whichever premise stands.

1	Margo's duty runs to the executor. The vo.4 repair engaged her to close the estate, and an engaged accountant reports a known unevicenced loan and a missing loan book to the personal representative. "No receivables evidenced" is her suppression, not Violet's omission. The sister as executor of a woman she was fighting is unexplained.	Serious, fatal to "police find nothing"	Fatal; the verdict's driver	Yes. The vo.4 repair created the duty it then asked her to breach. My error.	Margo is never engaged by the estate. Violet dies intestate (a woman with a solicitor and death-triggered envelopes who kept meaning to make a will; one line, and it is the irony of the sister fight: the sister, as next of kin, administers everything). The sister, hostile to Violet's friends, uses her own solicitor and her own accountant. Margo's Day 8 is canon already: she helps the sister with paperwork, which is handing over Violet's business books, and notices the debt book is not among them. The cash loan never entered the business books (from the barrel, no paper, by Violet's choice), so there is nothing in what she hands over. Her Day –120 note is a note of a conversation in her own working papers, not an estate record, and she is nobody's accountant in this estate. Around Day 45 the sister's accountant rings her: the café says Violet was calling in money; anything owed to her? Margo answers, truthfully and narrowly: nothing in the books. That question is the Day 47 arrival, and the answer is her choice, with a cost, which is what a lock needs. She has just done for the sister exactly what the letter did for the room.	Open
2	The suspect pool is closed by assertion. "Five people we know of": the meter box supports an uncounted outsider at least as well as it contradicts her clearance; Ruby's line converts a death into proof; a competent room looks outward first.	Serious (Margo's line: what do we know about that box that she didn't)	Fatal	Yes that the room must close the pool with facts, not with Liam's memory.	Two facts, both hers. First, the forgery keeps a sentence from her true letter, verbatim and true: only you four know where the spare lives. Beside "it isn't any of you, and I'd know" that is a contradiction in her own hand, and the room resolves it the way frightened people do: she was wrong about one of us, not wrong about her own meter box. Second, the outward look is done and shown on Day 15, in one evening, because Violet's life was small enough to audit in one evening: no cleaner, no lodger, no tradesman (Liam did every repair, including the catch), a smart meter nobody reads, a sister four years away who has never been in the house, and four people who were her whole week. They do not fail to look outward. They look, and there is nobody there, and that is the worst thing that could have happened to them.	Open

3	The fourteen days. Fable: Violet's own key to a store she works from (Brad has it on Day 0, or she is locked out of her kit); the executor cuts the lock on an estate asset between Day 5 and 13; the book of everything's fate; the forgery made in one exposed day at her bench. GPT: the enclosure, not the shackle (partition, roof, hinges, hasp).	Fatal on the fifth key; serious on Day 14	Serious	Yes on all, and three are v8.1's holes too. The book is canon (taken Day 0, burned Day 14, nobody else knew it existed) and my delta failed to say so.	Hers is one of the old brick boat stores at the sheds: a bay, a steel door on a shrouded hasp, no shared partition, nothing to lift; Brad's is a locker in the same corridor, not adjoining. She kept no key: when she changed the padlock she moved her hull kit to the van, and that is the dead-man design, nothing on her ring leads to the door (one line). The store is paid a year ahead in cash and the sheds hold no next of kin; the sister learns it exists when the market manager finds her, and cuts the padlock on Day 82, which is already canon. The book: canon, stated. Day 14: Brad drafts from Day 1 at his own bench from the book's list of what she noticed, so Day 14 at her bench is two hours to conform to her true letter, not a working day (Fable's improvement, adopted).	Open
4	The room has no fact that turns a fall into a killing (Fable); the man's back at 22:30 and "where were we that night" (Fable).	Serious	(not raised)	Yes. v8.1's letter supplied murder in her words; v0.4 removed it and I put nothing in its place.	The canon already holds the room's fact: two glasses of wine on the side, which Liam saw on Day 1 and the police read as an earlier visitor; and N°14's man in the lane at 22:30, which the neighbour tells Liam at the funeral. Someone was with her the night she died, and she had written that someone was getting in. "Where were we on the Monday night" is asked at meeting one and staged: Ruby on shift, Margo at home two hours up the coast (which she cannot say, so she says at home), Liam alone at the yard, Brad at home, on foot, alone. Nobody has an alibi and the quiet man has the least. Brad's answer is written, and it is the truth minus the walk.	Open
5	Chapter 7 is a suspect turn, not a forgery turn. The box number places a man at a door fourteen hours early; it does not prove substitution; the omissions remain readings.	Serious	Serious	Yes. I overclaimed "named".	Accept the correction as the design. Chapter 7 requires only that Brad deserves investigation: the man who defended Liam had the letter for fourteen hours before the four read it together. The structure's turn was always "probably not hers". Proof of the forgery arrives where the spine has it: the arrest on Day 333 and the panel on his wall. Which padlock the boat owner saw (Fable): her store's door, which he knew because she lettered his boat, read at the time as her pupil collecting her kit; the cover in section 4 is for being at the sheds, not for which door, consistent with row 247. 6	Violet and the trade. The first signwriter asks "have you shown Brad"; "never taught him leaf" does not mean he never learned; gilding is a technique and the alphabet is the fingerprint.	Serious	Serious	Yes. The exclusion is not competent and the pride does not survive the sequence.	She shows Brad. Last, after the trade has said yours twice. He says yours, and names the R. Three yours; she stops asking. Her true letter records it in one line: Brad says it's mine; everyone says it's mine; I didn't make it. Brad learns she has found it from her, to her face, which is cleaner than the café route for the Day –40 acceleration (the café stays as Ally's witness that she was asking). Ruling 7 of 2026-09-08 (teacher's pride) is withdrawn. The other three still never see the panel: not lettering people, and she has stopped asking.	Open
7	The sister and the ashes after Day 14. Four competent adults tell the executor and next of kin that they hold her mother.	Serious	Serious	Partly. They must have a reason, and it must be a choice with a cost.	They tell nobody anything about the letter, which is canon (none of the three mentions the letters at the Day 62 interviews). Telling the sister means telling her that Violet kept their mother from her for four years and lied about the point, while the letter that says so is unresolved and in Violet's hand. Four people decide on night one that Violet's sister hears nothing until they know what they are looking at. It is weaker than v8.1's kept murder accusation, which passed three rounds.	Open
8	The undated letter. Vi dated everything; "last month" without a date is an authenticity problem before the lists begin.	(not raised)	Serious	Yes; my "every date" was overreach.	The letter is dated as she dated everything, Day –19, the day before the lodging, which the solicitor's slip later corroborates. "One morning last month" then resolves to a month and still gives the room nothing to alibi against.	Open
9	The panel's exit at 07:20 (Fable).	Serious	(not raised)	Yes; unstated in the delta.	Canon supplies it: Brad's own locker in the same corridor is where the panel sits from Day 14 to Day 60, when it leaves in a bag for the ridge wall. The boat owner sees a signwriter carrying a board between two doors at the sheds where she kept her kit, and thinks nothing of it until Ally airs the place.	Open
10	The first minute	(as before)	(as before)	A test, not a ruling.	Unchanged: two versions to the three blind readers.	Held as a test

Carried to the spine's own list (v8.1 exposures answered here for the story)

Violet's own key and the dead-man design; the executor and the store's rent; intestacy and the sister as administrator; Margo's estate role; the trade's question and the day she shows Brad; the two glasses as the room's fact.

Provisional verdict, before the walk

Both adversaries moved from their previous positions (Fable: the device survives every front; GPT: REJECT to REWORK). The convergent driver, Margo's duty, was created by my v0.4 repair and is removed by not engaging her, which is also the more truthful version of the sister. The suspect pool closes on Violet's own sentence and a one-evening audit of a small life. The rest is machinery, and machinery the story needed under either premise. That is my hypothesis; the walk is the check, and Stephen rules each row.
