

PREMISE DELTA v0.6 (THE TRUSTING FORGERY, FOURTH CUT): DISPOSITION .

2026-09-11

Fourth round. Two independent adversaries attacked the same frozen text of four-keys-premise-delta-trusting-forgery-v0.6-2026-09-11.md. Fable: REWORK, high confidence, the device again not attacked ("the fourth cut fails on the table, not on the letter"). GPT: REWORK, high confidence, and concedes that the store answer holds. Findings merged in order of fatality with my concurrence and a provisional in-world answer. Walked with Stephen one row at a time; the Status column records his ruling. v8.1 remains in force.

What four rounds have shown

The device has not been broken in four rounds by two adversaries. The same joint has failed four times: Margo's lock, because every version has left the room a way to reach the money and the book before Day 47. This round's failure is mine directly: Brad's candour handed Margo the sentence "it'll be in her book" at meeting one. The repair below is not a fifth reason for Margo's silence. It is the return of her lock to the shape that passed three rounds under v8.1, a money lie only she can catch, with the accusation taken out of it. The second new finding, the key custody window on Day -19, is a chronology fault of one day and is closed by sequence. The third, the pool, is closed by a fact about her back door rather than a habit.

The table

1	The book at meeting one. Brad's candour puts a public debt, a self-set number and (in Margo's knowledge since Day 8) a vanished ledger on the table on Day 19; Margo or Ruby says "it'll be in her book" and the room lands on Brad. "Half repaid" is testable (bank, lawyer, drawer). The marathon item is Brad's own recorded lie and he would never include it.	Fatal; the driver	Fatal	Yes. Candour was my move and it made the joint worse.	Brad's candour goes. The forgery carries one kind line about Brad, in her voice, as the not-odd thing on her list: Brad paid me back the van money in October, every penny, which I never asked him to do that fast, and I put it here because it is the least odd thing that happened this year and I wanted one nice thing on the list. Three jobs in one sentence. It kills his motive in the room: nobody asks for the book because nobody thinks he owes anything, and a debt Vi says is paid is not odd. It is the letter's kindness to exactly one man, which chapter 7 already re-hears. And it is the one lie in the letter that only Margo can catch, because Violet told her on Day -120 that she was calling it in and nothing had come, and the only record is gone. That is v8.1's lock (C5 row 3, passed three rounds) without an accusation in it. Margo lists nothing about money on Day 19 because the letter has already covered it in Vi's hand. The third salted item is no longer about Brad: Ruby has been on nights since August and won't say why (true; roster; harmless), which spreads the salt across three people with two items on Liam. 2	Margo's silence must be unreadable to the room and unmistakable to Brad (GPT fatal). Her competent action after Day 50 is to tell the estate the number cannot be verified (GPT), or to test the cash trail (Fable).	Serious	Fatal	Yes as put against v0.6; the kind lie dissolves it.	Under the kind lie there is no estate demand, no payment and no number: the estate's accountant, asking about the missing book on Day 45, is told by Margo, truthfully, that the letter in Violet's hand says the van loan was repaid in October, and the estate closes its interest because a certified letter and no paper leave nothing to pursue. That call is her arrival: she hears herself certify, to a professional, a sentence she does not believe, because Violet forgot nothing and told her everything about money, and the book that would settle it left a locked house the night Violet died. Reading, not proof; she cannot take it anywhere (a conversation in July against a letter in Vi's hand that the police later stamp as hers; a client's confidence; the room would ask how she knows, in front of him; the man it points at defends Liam). The asymmetry that answers GPT: Brad is the only person alive who knows there is a lie in the letter and who can catch it. Violet told him on Day –110 that her accountant had told her to have paper. So he watches Margo from the Monday night, and when the one person who can catch the kind line stops arguing with him at meeting six, he reads it, and nobody else at the table can. Her silence is unreadable to the room and unmistakable to him because of what he knows and they do not. Same mechanism as v8.1 rows 122 to 125.	Open
3	The key custody window. Keys cut Day –19, lodged Day –18; Brad, with covert access to her house, copies one overnight and sanitises the store before Day 0 (GPT fatal).	(not raised)	Fatal	Yes. A one-day fault in my chronology.	Sequence, one morning, Day –19, in her book with times: keys cut on Lantern Street at nine; the panel, the letter and Mum into the store and the padlock on at ten, Brad at the sheds watching; the four keys into four envelopes at Civic Row before noon. The keys are never in her house. Brad's window is the length of a walk with her carrying them.	Open
4	The pool. Her habit of the door excludes strangers, not outsiders: the solicitor (male, active, trusted), the trade she showed the panel to, the market manager (GPT fatal; Fable serious).	Serious	Fatal	Yes: a necessary condition was made sufficient.	The fact that reduces the pool to the four is the back door, not the front. N914 saw the man leave by the back lane. Violet's back door does not catch unless you lift it as you pull; Liam fitted it and every one of the four has cursed it on a Tuesday night. Liam found it latched. Whoever left knew the trick, and the only people who used that door were the people who came in by the yard: her four. The solicitor has never been past her front room; the trade has never been in the house. So: let in or let himself in, and out through a door only they knew how to shut. That is the sentence that closes the room, and it is physical.	Open
5	Brad and the book before Day 0 (Fable): a man with the spare and nineteen days reads what she writes down; otherwise the landing is luck. Also the forcing date on the money.	Serious	(folded into 6)	Yes; adopt both.	He reads her book on Day –9, in her house, with the spare, while she is at the slip: the store, the keys lodged, the four envelopes, the tin, the shelf. The plan is made in knowledge, which is this man. Day 0 is still the money visit, because the money has a date: the solicitor's account for the hearing falls due at the month's end and she told Brad on Day –110 she wanted the van money by then. He comes on the last Monday before it.	Open

6	Ruby's doubt on Day 14 ("didn't sound like Vi") is a tampering thought the delta plants and then parks for three hundred days (Fable).	Serious	(not raised)	Yes; the dismissal must be written.	Ruby says it; Liam answers it, because he knows why: Vi and the police, the night her mother died (canon C1: her refusal of the police is competent and has a history). Ruby lets it go, and it is the thing she tells Ally she should not have let go.	Open
7	The spare left in the meter box while she padlocks a boat store is out of character (Fable).	Cosmetic to serious	(not raised)	Yes.	She moves it after the tin, to the second pot by the yard door, and tells the four on the slip in one sentence, which is how Liam finds her on Day 1 and how the four remember, on Day 15, with a chill, that she had told them she'd moved it and not why. "Only you four know where the spare lives" stays true of the new place.	Open
8	The rucksack seen from behind (Fable).	Serious	(not raised)	Yes.	No rucksack. The book under his coat. N°14: a man's back, a coat, hands empty.	Open
9	The market manager silent for eighty-two days (Fable). GPT: the store answer holds.	Serious	None	Partly.	One line: forty bays let for cash to people who do not want questions asked, and he asks none; when he hears she has died he assumes the friends will clear it, as friends do at the sheds. He never contacts a sister he has never heard of.	Open
10	The covering slip must list four addressees for the box number to show (Fable).	Cosmetic	(not raised)	Yes.	The solicitor's slip in each envelope lists the four addressees as instructed, one of them a box number; Ally reads it on Ruby's copy in chapter 7.	Open
11	The first minute	(not raised)	(not raised)	Held as a test.	Unchanged.	Held

Carried to the spine regardless of premise

The back door's trick as the pool-closing fact. Keys cut, used and lodged in one morning. Brad reads the book on Day -9. The forcing date on the money. The spare moved and told. No rucksack. The market manager's line. The slip.

Provisional verdict, before the walk

Both adversaries returned REWORK for the third consecutive round, both leave the device alone, and GPT concedes a front for the first time. The driver is closed by removing my own candour move and restoring the lock shape that already survived three rounds under v8.1; the custody window is a sequence fix; the pool closes on a physical fact. That is my hypothesis; the walk is the check, and Stephen rules each row.
