

Episode 2 — The Ferryman

Echoes of Havenbay · full script draft

v4 (logic-and-structure pass) · 12 July 2026

Echoes of Havenbay · v4 (logic-and-structure pass) 2026-07-12 · conforms to episode-writers-prompt.md v2 + pilot-spec relaxations

Format canon & the clock

The tip line keeps voices, timestamps and nothing else — that’s the promise, and this episode’s opening honors it: Rosa’s message is a voicemail in which she chooses to identify herself. The absolute clock: her message is timestamped 10:52 p.m., Sunday; the episode opens Monday. Datelines: D1 Mon (L1) · D2 Tue (L2, 6 a.m.; L3, afternoon) · D3 Wed (L4) · D4 Thu (L5 milestone — that morning’s crossing passes unobserved; nobody knows the schedule yet) · D6 Sat (L6) · D7 Sun (L7) · D9 Tue (L8) · D10 Wed (L9) · D11 Thu, 4:40 a.m. (L10 — the next Thursday crossing; the investigation has to wait for the tide) · D12 Fri (L11) · D13 Sat (L12).

2006 anchors (locked): Danny’s last genuine logbook entry — Sunday, 8 October 2006; he vanishes that night. His launch is found circling under Kestrel Point on the morning of the 9th, motor run dry. The Gazette’s unbylined “thief” brief runs on the 10th. The meet with the journalist was set for Thursday, 12 October. The file closes on the 14th — six days.

Evidential language rule: “staged” and “probable homicide” until Del’s official intake (L11) earns the word; L12 may say “homicide investigation” because by then it is one. The vessel is a harbour launch — oars and an auxiliary outboard with a tiller; Danny rowed the crossings because quiet was the job; Merrick used the motor to stage it. Episode 1’s quiet boats and this episode’s route are never claimed as one operation — resonance only, connection reserved for an explicit season decision.

Logline

In 2006, the night ferryman Danny Reyes rowed Havenbay harbour’s last crossing. He never came back. The boat did. The file said accident, the town said thief, and his daughter spent twenty years knowing both were lies. Ally proves the accident was manufactured — and discovers the money route Danny died carrying still runs on the same tide, watched by someone who has been collecting her family for twenty years.

The victim: Danny Reyes — and Rosa Reyes, 39, who runs the Harbor Ward fuel dock and has kept her father’s logbook since she was nineteen.

The secret: Danny was the harbour’s bagman — “the ferryman” was a job before it was a name. Every Thursday for eleven years he took unbanked cash from Pier 13 across the water in a small harbour launch, rowing the reach even with a motor aboard, because quiet was the job. He carried the money; he never took it. In his final month he began keeping a parallel ledger because he wanted out — the same month dock foreman “Sailor” Merrick offered nineteen-year-old Rosa a job on the dock accounts. Danny was building a case and a door out for his daughter, and he was going to trade the ledger to a journalist. The journalist was Thomas Quinn. Danny disappeared on the Sunday, four days before the Thursday meet. Merrick (d. 2011) motored the launch out, staged it under Kestrel Point, and wrote Danny’s final logbook entry himself — and a coin was left taped to the tiller. The route never stopped. Its current operator — the Ferryman — knows exactly who Ally is.

The reveal ladder: 1. The Gazette itself carried the “thief” smear — and its morgue holds a 2006 records-request packet (requester’s name long redacted) containing the effects list the official file lost: one coin, taped to the tiller — the same worn brass as the coin from a Rivermouth phone cradle. (L3) 2. Priya’s tide work proves the launch arrived under power and was left performing an accident — and the final logbook entry isn’t Danny’s hand. Staged. (L4) 3. Danny wasn’t robbing the till — he was the till: the second ledger, cut from a fused cashbox behind the fuel-dock till, shows a fortune crossing every Thursday. In his last month he starts underlining — the month Merrick reached for Rosa. (L7) 4. The redacted requester, and the journalist Danny was building the case for: Thomas Quinn. The meet never happened. (L8→L9) 5. The Thursday crossings never stopped — and Eddie’s own gate book puts Merrick’s hand on Danny’s forged goodbye. The Pier 13 drop is live this Thursday. (L6, confirmed L10) 6. The Ferryman leaves Ally an envelope: his coin, and her father’s original 2006 press badge — kept for twenty years. THE ROUTE OUTLIVES ITS RIDERS. (L10)

Lead table

#	id	Type	Title	Day	Gates	Requirement theme	Band
1	f2_tip	Podcast	The Boat Came Back	D1 Mon	(episode start)	forensic tools — setting up the interview rig	Easy
2	f2_rosa	Interview	The Fuel Dock	D2 Tue, 6 a.m.	spawned by L1	diner food — 6 a.m. coffee and pastries for Rosa	Easy
3	f2_gazette	Evidence	What the Gazette Printed	D2 Tue	spawned by L1	press items — Arthur’s morgue files	Standard
4	f2_tides	Data	Run the Tides	D3 Wed	L2 + L3	forensic tools — Priya’s charts and light table	Standard
5	f2_pod1	Podcast	Episode Update: The Man Who Rowed	D4 Thu	L4	press items — cutting the mid-season episode	Standard (milestone : +200 CaseCash, +20 energy)

#	id	Type	Title	Day	Gates	Requirement theme	Band
6	f2_watchman	Interview	The Man Who Locked the Gates	D6 Sat	spawned by L5	diner food — a bus-stop meeting, two coffees	Standard
7	f2_ledger	Money Trail	The Second Ledger	D7 Sun	spawned by L5	garage tools — cutting a fused cashbox open at Malone's	Hard
8	f2_gerald	Discuss	Gerald's Booth	D9 Tue	spawned by L5	harbour/bar items — the Rusty Anchor	Standard
9	f2_badge	Evidence	The Gate Pass	D10 Wed	L7 + L8	fingerprint evidence — Thomas's lockbox papers	Hard
10	f2_pier13	Location	Pier 13	D11 Thu, 4:40 a.m.	L9 + L6	harbour items — staking out the pylons	Very Hard (+2 ingots)
11	f2_delacruz	Interview	Make It Official	D12 Fri	L10	forensic tools — the intake packet, indexed and bagged	Standard
12	f2_close	Podcast	The Ferryman, Part One	D13 Sat	L11	ceremonial: one low-tier press item — "press Publish"	Very Hard (milestone : +500 CaseCash, +20 energy, +3 ingots)

Card subtitles: 1. A voicemail at 10:52 on a Sunday night. "You say goodnight to the harbour. It kept my father in 2006." 2. Rosa Reyes kept her father's logbook through the smear and the silence. She's ready to open it. 3. The Reyes file closed in six days, and the Gazette helped bury him. Arthur Finch owes this one. 4. Water moves the way it moves, whoever signs the paperwork. Priya Shah checks the tides against the story. 5. Four days on the water. Time to tell Havenbay what the logbook says. 6. Eddie Okafor locked the harbour gates for thirty years. He'll talk — two suburbs from the water. 7. A corroded cashbox behind the fuel-dock till, Danny's initials scratched underneath. He kept a second book. 8. Gerald's booth at the Anchor. He remembers the Reyes closure — and whose diary mentions a Thursday meet. 9. Dad's lockbox holds a Pier 13 gate pass for Thursday, 12 October 2006. It was never used. 10. Thursday, 4:40 a.m., Pier 13. If the route still runs, it runs tonight. 11. A probable homicide, a falsified file, a live operation. Interview room three. Del Cruz is listening. 12. Danny Reyes was not a thief. Say it on the record.

Portraits: Ally, Gerald, Del Cruz, Rosa Reyes (new — 1 of the 4-per-episode budget; voicemail + fuel dock). Arthur, Priya, Eddie and Mo are quoted in Ally's narration.

Dialogue scripts

L1 — f2_tip · “The Boat Came Back” (4 nodes)

#	Speaker	Emotion	Line
1	Rosa (voicemail)	neutral	[steady — rehearsed for twenty years] My name is Rosa Reyes. You say goodnight to the harbour every week, like it's a friend. It kept my father. Danny Reyes rowed the last crossing for eleven years. One night he didn't come back. The boat did.
2	Ally	neutral	The tip line keeps voices, timestamps and nothing else — that's the promise. At 10:52 on Sunday night, Rosa Reyes chose to leave her name, the fuel dock, and one reason to come find her: the last entry in her father's logbook isn't his handwriting.
3	Ally	worried	Accident, the file said — closed in six days, with a rumour pinned to a dead man's coat: that he'd been skimming the till. The harbour believed it for twenty years. His daughter never did.
4	Ally	neutral	I've read a lot of last words. These were written by someone still breathing. This is Echoes of Havenbay. Episode two starts at the water. (sets aq.lead.f2_tip.seen)

L2 — f2_rosa · “The Fuel Dock” (4 nodes)

#	Speaker	Emotion	Line
1	Ally	neutral	The Harbor Ward fuel dock at six a.m. smells like diesel and old rain. Rosa Reyes has run it since she was nineteen — since the week the harbour decided her father was a thief who fell in the dark.
2	Rosa	neutral	He hated the water at night. Twenty years on the crossing and he never once swam. He kept oars on a boat with a motor, because quiet was the job. Ferrymen don't fall, Miss Quinn. They get put over the side.
3	Ally	worried	She gave me the logbook. Eleven years of crossings, one line each — weather, cargo, initials. The last line has no weather and no initials, and the ink skips like the pen was moving too fast.
4	Ally	neutral	Rosa kept this book through the smear, the silence, the sympathy casseroles. Twenty years is a long time to hold a door open. I intend to walk through it.

#	Speaker	Emotion	Line

L3 — f2_gazette · “What the Gazette Printed” (4 nodes)

#	Speaker	Emotion	Line
1	Ally	neutral	Arthur Finch keeps the Gazette’s memory in a basement he calls the morgue. He pulled the Reyes clippings before I finished asking. He’d been waiting for someone to ask for twenty years.
2	Ally	surprised	“We ran the thief story,” he said, laying down the 2006 brief — four sentences, no byline, no source. “It arrived written. I was junior desk that week; I filed my objection, and they filed me. So I kept everything.”
3	Ally	surprised	Everything includes a 2006 records-request packet — requester’s name long since redacted — holding what the official file lost: the effects list from the launch. Rope, thermos, tackle box. And one item nobody explains: a single coin, taped to the tiller.
4	Ally	worried	Old brass, worn smooth — the same kind Del lifted from a phone cradle in Rivermouth. Files this clean don’t happen by accident, and smears don’t write themselves. Somebody built this forgetting — and twenty years on, somebody is still leaving the same coin.

L4 — f2_tides · “Run the Tides” (3 nodes)

#	Speaker	Emotion	Line
1	Ally	neutral	Dr. Priya Shah spread the 2006 tide tables across her light table like an accusation. Here’s what a tide can’t do: lie. Water moves the way it moves, whoever signs the paperwork.
2	Ally	surprised	“A drifting boat on that night’s ebb ends up two miles south,” she said. “Danny’s launch was found circling under Kestrel Point the next morning, motor run dry. It didn’t drift, Ally. It arrived under power — and was left performing an accident.”
3	Ally	neutral	And the last line? Eleven years of Danny’s open fours and flat sevens — the goodbye has neither, plus an abbreviation he never used once. Somebody wrote it for him. For now I’m writing “staged” where “murder” wants to go.

L5 — f2_pod1 · “Episode Update: The Man Who Rowed” (4 nodes; node 3 varies on the Episode 1 flag)

#	Speaker	Emotion	Line
1	Ally	neutral	[host register, steadier than she feels] This is Echoes of Havenbay. Four days on the water. Here’s what we know.

#	Speaker	Emotion	Line
2	Ally	neutral	Danny Reyes rowed the harbour's last crossing for eleven years, and one night in 2006 his boat came home without him. The file says accident. The tides say the boat was driven. The logbook says his last words belong to someone else's hand.
3a	Ally	worried	(requires aq.e1.truth_public) Last case, I gave this city the whole sound and took the noise that came with it. This time, some things stay off the feed until the people attached to them are safe. A listener wrote that rule. I'm just reading it out.
3b	Ally	worried	(requires aq.e1.truth_protected) Last case, I held the audio and let quiet do the work. I'm holding again: names, places, and everything a frightened witness owns stay off this feed until they're safe. A listener wrote that rule. I'm just reading it out.
4	Ally	neutral	Danny Reyes didn't fall. And the man who wrote his goodbye may have written more than one. Stay with me. (narrative flag: f2.phase1.complete — fires on Proceed)

L6 — f2_watchman · “The Man Who Locked the Gates” (5 nodes)

#	Speaker	Emotion	Line
1	Ally	neutral	Eddie Okafor locked the harbour gates every night for thirty years. He agreed to meet me at a bus stop two suburbs from the water. His choice. His route.
2	Ally	surprised	“Thursday nights the Pier 13 gate stayed open,” he said. “Merrick’s orders. Special crossing. No manifest, no lights — and you didn’t look at the boat. You looked at your shoes.”
3	Ally	worried	Sailor Merrick. Dock foreman, 2001 to 2011. Died with a marina berth he couldn’t afford and a funeral nobody cried at. Eddie says Merrick took a boat out the night Danny vanished. He’s been afraid for twenty years — not of Merrick. Of whoever Merrick answered to.
4	Ally	surprised	Eddie kept his own gate book — thirty years of Thursdays in his careful hand. Merrick’s countersignatures are all closed fours and hooked sevens. Priya has both books now. The hand that signed the gates open wrote Danny’s goodbye.
5	Ally	neutral	“The Thursday crossings didn’t stop when Danny died,” he told me — still whispering, in daylight. “They never stopped at all.” Dot Ellis counted quiet boats from her window in Rivermouth. Different water, same discipline. This city has a habit.

L7 — f2_ledger · “The Second Ledger” (4 nodes)

#	Speaker	Emotion	Line
1	Ally	neutral	Rosa found it the week this show sent her back to the old dock office: a corroded cashbox behind the till housing, her father’s initials scratched underneath, the lock fused to rust. We cut it open at Malone’s. Inside: the second book.
2	Ally	surprised	Same eleven years, different truth. Amounts, dates, and five names that aren’t names — Pilot, Chalk, Anchor, Ledger, and one that’s just F. Cash out from Pier 13 on Thursdays. Cash back at dawn, lighter.
3	Ally	neutral	Run the totals and this harbour moved more money in a year than the port authority declared in five. None of it ever touched a bank. All of it crossed dark water in a rowing boat.
4	Ally	worried	Danny wasn’t stealing from the till. Danny was the till. In his final month the entries change — he starts underlining. The month Merrick offered Rosa a job on the dock accounts. He wasn’t just building a case. He was building Rosa a way out.

L8 — f2_gerald · “Gerald’s Booth” (4 nodes)

#	Speaker	Emotion	Line
1	Gerald	worried	Mo kept the booth clear and the coffee coming — she remembers Danny, you know. I remember the closure. Six days. The detective who signed it retired eighteen months later, boat and berth, the whole postcard. Nobody asks where a pension like that comes from. That’s the point of it.
2	Ally	surprised	Gerald — Dad’s 2006 diary. October. “D.R., last crossing, Thursday. He keeps a book.” The meet never happened, did it. Danny disappeared on the Sunday, four days short. And the redacted name on Arthur’s records request — that was Dad.
3	Gerald	sad	Your father carried that one to the end, love. He decided his phone was the leak, and he never wrote a source’s real name again. All those initials in his files — Danny Reyes taught him that. Posthumously.
4	Ally	neutral	Danny was a ferryman; the Ferryman is whoever sent the boat. Twenty years, two Quinns, the same route. Whoever they are, they’ve been part of this family longer than I have. Time they met me properly.

L9 — f2_badge · “The Gate Pass” (3 nodes)

#	Speaker	Emotion	Line
1	Ally	neutral	Dad’s lockbox again. I used to think it was a shrine. It’s a

#	Speaker	Emotion	Line
			filing cabinet with a guilt complex.
2	Ally	surprised	October 2006: a Pier 13 gate pass, visitor class, made out to T. Quinn for Thursday the twelfth. Never used. Under it, a note in his shorthand: "If D. doesn't show, the book goes to the water. Don't chase it. They count the ones who chase."
3	Ally	worried	He stopped chasing — for two years, until another story wouldn't let him sleep. That story waits. Tonight is Danny's. The gate pass names the drop, and the drop matches a line in the second ledger. If the Thursday crossings never stopped, neither did Pier 13.

L10 — f2_pier13 · "Pier 13" (5 nodes)

#	Speaker	Emotion	Line
1	Ally	worried	Thursday, 4:40 a.m. Pier 13, north shed — where a gate pass says my father should have stood. Del had a car three minutes out; Gerald had my live location and a deadline. Rosa's blessing rode shotgun. I have never felt less alone in an empty place.
2	Ally	surprised	At 5:02 a launch crossed with no lights. One figure, one crate, gone in ninety seconds. Twenty years after Danny Reyes went into the water, his route still runs on his tide.
3	Ally	surprised	The crate wasn't cargo. It was left facing my hide, lid loose, one envelope inside. My name on it — not "A. Quinn." Ally . The way a friend would write it.
4	Ally	worried	I photographed it where it sat, then opened it — it was addressed to me, and evidence was never its point. Inside: a coin like the one on Danny's tiller. My father's 2006 press badge — not a copy, the badge. And five words in block capitals: THE ROUTE OUTLIVES ITS RIDERS.
5	Ally	angry	[cold precision, not volume] You want me scared. Noted. But you kept his badge for twenty years — a souvenir, Ferryman, which makes this a collection. Collections get found. I'm coming for the rest of it.

L11 — f2_delcruz · "Make It Official" (4 nodes)

#	Speaker	Emotion	Line
1	Ally	neutral	For once, Del Cruz didn't meet me on a bench. Harbor Ward precinct, interview room three, recorder running, door closed. Her ward. Her water. Her case number, by the end of it.
2	Del Cruz	neutral	"You're handing me a probable homicide with a falsified file, a dead facilitator, and a live operation," she said. "You know what that does to a career?" I said I didn't.

#	Speaker	Emotion	Line
			She said, “Wakes it up. Mine’s been asleep for years.”
3	Ally	worried	Everything went in under its own name: Rosa’s logbook, the second ledger, Priya’s tide report, Eddie’s gate book — and Eddie himself as a protected witness. The live operation she can’t touch without a taskforce. Taskforces leak. We both know where.
4	Ally	neutral	Rosa will get a phone call this week that’s twenty years late. It won’t say “murder” yet. It will say “reopened.” Some words weigh more in an ear that’s waited that long.

L12 — f2_close · “The Ferryman, Part One” (5 nodes)

#	Speaker	Emotion	Line
1	Ally	neutral	This is Echoes of Havenbay — and as of nine o’clock this morning, the Reyes crossing is open again. A homicide investigation, with a case number and a detective who answers her phone.
2	Ally	neutral	Danny Reyes was not a thief. Say it at the fuel dock. Say it at Mo’s. He carried criminal money for eleven years — carried it, never took it — and when he tried to put it down, the water was told to keep him.
3	Ally	sad	Rosa listened to the whole episode standing up, holding the logbook. When it ended, she wrote one line beneath her father’s last one — in her own hand, with today’s date. Ledgers should end honestly. Now this one does.
4	Ally	worried	The man who ordered that crossing is still out there, still counting. He kept my father’s badge for twenty years, and gave it back to tell me he’d had it. He believes the route outlives its riders.
5	Ally	neutral	Maybe it does. But hear this, Havenbay: routes need water, and the tide is turning. I’m Ally Quinn. Episode three is already recording. (narrative flag: f2.ep02.complete — fires on Proceed)

Season-arc notch

This episode converts the Ferryman from a name into a present, aware antagonist — and makes it generational: he watched Thomas, now he watches Ally, and he wants her to know. New season facts: the money route is older than any corporate name the season will meet (the Voss Bio thread lands ~Episode 5, unnamed on air until then) and moves physically by water from Pier 13 on a fixed Thursday tide; the operation uses code names (Pilot, Chalk, Anchor, Ledger, F); the coin calling-card goes back at least to 2006 and is the same type as the Rivermouth coin (an evidentiary link between calling cards, not between operations); the Ferryman kept Thomas Quinn’s original press badge for twenty years — he collects; Thomas lost a source in 2006 and never wrote a source’s real name again. Deliberately unanswered: whether “F” is the Ferryman himself or his operator (a broker like Silas Vex fits the ledger’s handwriting-free discipline); what the crossings carry now; where the route lands; whether the Rivermouth quiet boats and the Thursday crossings share water or masters — resonance planted at L6n5, the connection reserved for an explicit season decision; and — pointed at Episode 3 — why Del Cruz believes a taskforce would leak from inside Havenbay PD.

The resolution beat

Rosa. Twenty years of holding a door open, resolved not by an arrest (her father’s killer is dead) but by the truth said out loud and the case reopened — sealed by the image of her writing the logbook’s final line herself, in her own hand, with the date. The ledger ends honestly. That’s the episode’s thesis in one physical action, and Ally never explains it.

Canon usage note

Canon used: Pier 13 (the drop — its coin lore is the episode’s spine), the Ferryman’s coin (planted in the 2006 effects list, connected by type to Episode 1’s Rivermouth coin — which never aired, so the link stays inside the investigation on either branch), Arthur Finch/the Gazette morgue (the smear ran in his own paper; he was junior desk, objected, was overruled, and kept the redacted records-request packet), Dr. Priya Shah (tides + questioned-document comparison against Danny’s own entries and Eddie’s gate book), Kestrel Point (where the launch was staged), Malone’s garage (cutting the fused cashbox — the garage requirement made diegetic), the Rusty Anchor + Mo Callahan (Gerald’s booth), Sgt. Del Cruz/Harbor Ward (formal intake, interview room three), Thomas Quinn’s lockbox/shorthand/source discipline, the ~Ep5 Voss Bio thread (production note only — L9n3 keeps it unnamed on air), Dot Ellis (one resonance line, L6n5), Silas Vex (season hypothesis only), Episode 1’s PUBLIC/PROTECTED flag (L5n3a/3b variant). Invented (episode-level only): Danny and Rosa Reyes (victim and keeper — no canon role exists; Rosa takes one of the episode’s four portrait slots), Eddie Okafor (witness — his gate book is the forgery match), Sailor Merrick (dead hand of the crime). Each fills a role canon deliberately leaves open per episode.

v3 changes (2026-07-12 — season-order re-points, per bible Ch 6.2)

Item	Resolution
1 · L1 caller opener	“You found the ghost student” replaced with The Listener’s goodnight-harbour ritual — the caller trusts the show because it listens, not because of a named prior case.
2 · Voss Bio	Unnamed in dialogue (generalized); survives as a production note; the thread lands ~Ep5 (Ghost Student).
3 · Aired-so-far audit	No other on-air references to prior episodes found.
4 · Rivermouth resonance	One light connective line (quiet boats); villain identity deliberately NOT connected.

v4 changes (2026-07-12 — logic-and-structure pass; external review triaged against canon)

Accepted and applied:

Item	Resolution
1 · Tip-line canon	Live “line two” opening replaced with Rosa’s voicemail (she chooses to identify herself); L1 retitled “The Boat Came Back”; timestamp 10:52 p.m. Sunday.
2 · L5 leak	Second-ledger tease and attic-location leak removed; replaced with the branch-echo editorial-practice node (3a/3b on aq.e1.truth_public/protected).
3 · Ledger discovery	Taped tin box → corroded cashbox behind the fuel-dock till, initials scratched beneath, lock fused; found because the investigation sent Rosa back; cut open at Malone’s (garage requirement now diegetic).
4 · Handwriting	Handedness inference replaced with feature comparison (open fours, flat sevens, an unused abbreviation) vs Danny’s eleven years — and matched to Merrick via Eddie’s gate book (new node, L6n4).
5 · Vessel	Locked as a harbour launch: oars + auxiliary outboard + tiller; Danny rowed (quiet was the job), Merrick motored it to Kestrel Point; “motor run dry,” “left performing an accident.”
6 · Absolute clock	Full dateline table (D1–D13) + locked 2006 anchors (last entry Sun 8 Oct; meet Thu 12 Oct; file closed 14 Oct — six days). The investigation now visibly waits for Thursday’s tide .
7 · Pier 13 competence	Del’s car three minutes out, Gerald holding live location + deadline; photograph-first, and the evidence cost of opening acknowledged (“evidence was never its point”).
8 · The badge	Photocopy → Thomas’s original 2006 press badge; the “collection” deduction now valid; L10n5 and L12n4 rewritten around possession.
9 · Coin bridge	Ep1 coin explicitly connected by type at L3n4 (“the same kind Del lifted from a phone cradle in Rivermouth”) — private, so it works on either Ep1 branch; L10’s coin is “a coin like the one on Danny’s tiller,” never “the same coin.”
10 · Official intake	L11 moved into Harbor Ward precinct, interview room three, recorder running; evidence entered under its own names; Eddie as protected witness; “officially anonymous, unofficially airtight” cut.
11 · L12 economy	Requirement made ceremonial (one low-tier press item — “press Publish”), mirroring Episode 1; milestone rewards unchanged.
12 · Rosa presence	Rosa speaks directly with portrait: L1 voicemail + L2n2 (one new portrait character, within the 4-per-episode budget).
13 · Evidential language	“Staged”/“probable homicide” until L11’s intake; L12’s “homicide investigation” is now procedurally earned.
14 · Title lands	“Danny was a ferryman; the Ferryman is whoever sent the boat” (L8n4).

Item	Resolution
15 · Danny's motive & complexity	The underlining month = the month Merrick offered Rosa a dock-accounts job (L7n4); L12n2 keeps moral precision ("carried it, never took it").
16 · Arthur's guilt	Junior desk, filed his objection, was overruled, kept everything — including the redacted records-request packet (which quietly plants the L8 Thomas reveal).
17 · Line notes	Logline gains "He never came back. The boat did."; "Season talk" → "That story waits"; "two Quinns in the same ledger" → "Twenty years, two Quinns, the same route"; L6 Dot line sharpened.

Rejected or modified (with reasons):

Suggestion	Ruling
"Dot's and Eddie's numbers agree"	Rejected as written — it evidentially merges the two operations, which canon reserves for an explicit season decision. Kept as resonance: "Different water, same discipline."
Rosa post-episode voicemail	Skipped — it would clone Episode 1's Dot-voicemail close into formula. Rosa's logbook line remains the ending image.
L12 should not be Very Hard	Half-adopted: the requirement is now ceremonial (Episode 1's own pattern); the Very Hard band stays because it labels the milestone reward tier, not the grind.
L4 as murder proof	Adopted in spirit: L4 now closes on "staged," and the word "homicide" is earned procedurally through L11's intake.

Open decisions for Stephen (before lock):

1. The branch point. The greenlit package expects exactly one choice per episode (Phase 2); Ep2 still has none — the L5 3a/3b nodes are an echo of Ep1's flag, not a new choice. Candidates: (a) L7 — open the cashbox on-air vs. privately at Malone's (spectacle vs. chain of custody); (b) L11 — let Del take Eddie in as a protected witness (slower, safer) vs. air the gate-book match immediately (faster, exposes Eddie). Candidate (b) is the stronger argument-starter and rhymes with Ep1's PUBLIC/PROTECTED without repeating it. Needs your call + flag naming.
2. Rosa's portrait — approve adding her to the portrait pipeline (prompt block to be written into portrait-prompts-canon-cast.md on approval).
3. Press/garage art gate — Ep2 leans on press (L3, L5, L12) and garage (L7) families; both are art-gated today. Fine on the Ep2 timeline (6–8 weeks post-launch), but the icon batches need scheduling.

Remaining before lock: branch decision → table read (performance/timing veto) → numbered-revision passes → VO LOCK; cue sheet and actor sides generate from asset data at production.